Drought Addendum

Don't let the drought deter your Trophy Awards entries. The judges reward well-done irrigation systems and recognize the limits local officials and conditions may place on water usage.

In fact, creative compliance with local ordinances and water agency restrictions frequently results in a higher score from the judges, who want to recognize those who work within the rules to contribute to a beautiful California.

As one judge noted during California's last drought, brown is the new green.

Please describe how the drought and local restrictions have impacted your entry or the process you used to complete your project. The judges cannot be familiar with the regulations of each of California's 400-plus water districts, so please describe the challenges this project faced.

Completing this Drought Addendum is optional. Failure to submit this form would not disqualify your project, but may limit the judge's ability to fairly rank your project against the competition.
